WANTED!

Choice U.S. Coins

This probably is the most over-worked phrase in numismatic advertising. We would like to be original, but we can think of no better way to express our urgent need for choice material in all United States series.

Our greatest demand at the moment is for Proofs - 1915 and earlier, particularly Gold and Silver. Consequently we can pay a very high price for these.

My personal preference has always been the early U. S. coins. Our stock is quite low and we are anxious to buy this type material in all conditions.

The present demand for modern complete sets now finds us short of many 20th Century Uncirculated coins to make up such sets. For example - we are badly in need of 1949 Half Dollars; 1934 D, 1936 D, 1938 P and 1939 S Quarters; 1939 S and D Nickels; 1934 D Cents; and many others too numerous to mention.

We must continuously buy in order to supply our large wholesale and retail trade. And we are paying a fair market price for any material we can use.

If you contemplate selling your collection, your duplicates, or any items that no longer interest you, we would appreciate your letting us know. Fantastic claims and promises are not our policy. We ask only the opportunity to figure with you in a sincere and business-like manner. No collection is too large for us to handle; nor too small to be considered.

THE AUTOMOBILE DOLLAR

One of the only coins in the world decorated with the likeness of an automobile is the unique dollar size silver piece of Kweichow, China.

Some thirty-odd years ago, an American made sedan was transported part by part via boat, rail, bamboo litter and coolie, to the capitol, Kweiyang of this mountainous, highway-less interior province.

The parts, when assembled, became the first motor vehicle ever seen or used there. In honor of the event, the governor, Chow Hsi-Cheng, directed the mint to strike a coin embellished with its resemblance.

The province today is coupled by highways to every adjacent province and has ended its age-long isolation.

The first knowledge about the "Automobile Dollar" to reach this country came with the return of a United States Trade Commissioner from Shanghai. The specimen he displayed caused much comment and interest. Several others have been found in this country.

THE CONNECTICUT COMMEMORATIVE HALF DOLLAR

Nothing in Connecticut could have been more appropriately selected than the Charter Oak, known by reputation to every school boy in the country.

In June, 1633, standing under the branches of this venerable oak, with a hole in its side, the Chief of the Pequot Indian tribe sold "Dutch Point" and much of what is now the city of Hartford, to Jacob Van Curler for a bolt of woolen cloth, six kettles, six axes, eighteen knives, a pair of shears, and a musket.

Based on the voyage of John Cabot in 1497, the English claimed most of North America, so that when the Mohican Indians recommended the fertile valley of the Connecticut River to the settlers of Massachusetts Colony, the Rev. Thomas Hooker, with a band of pilgrims, traveled overland and established the town of Hartford.

Under the same tree the Hooker Company bought the same property of Sequassen, Chief of the river Indians, for a consignment of coats, blankets, knives and hoes, and agreed as a condition of the bill of sale never to cut down the old tree, where the Indians for generations had conducted their tribal ceremonies.

There was never any question about the priority of the Dutch settlement in their "House of Hope," but rather their right to the preemption. In 1638, New Haven was settled by a distinguished company of emigrants from England. The first constitution was adopted in 1639, being the first time in history when a government was organized and defined by a written constitution. Its leading features were afterward copied in the constitutions of the other states and of the United States, and it was the basis of the charter of 1662.

James II sent Sir Edmund Andros to become Governor of the Colony of Connecticut. On the night of October 31-November 1, 1687, he announced in the Provincial Council his instructions to confiscate the Charter, and rule the colony by decree. Suddenly the candles were extinguished. When they were relit, it was discovered that Joseph Wadsworth and the Charter had disappeared. He had run the equivalent of four blocks south and hid the Charter in the bosom of that great oak tree.

Now a certain George Wyllys decided to leave England and join the Hooker Company. He sent William Gibbons with twenty men and the framework for a large house. The land assigned to Wyllys chanced to include the celebrated old oak, whose existence had been guaranteed in the original transfer of the land. It was Wyllys' daughter, Ruth, who finally in 1689 divulged the hiding place.

Before the turn of the century, the copy of the Charter that had been retained in England, was sent over to the colony by William III. Both are now in the archives of the Connecticut Historical Society and the State Library and often on display.

The Charter Oak was blown down in August, 1856, when its age was computed to be nearly 1,000 years.

The work on the design of the coin was a P.W.A. project. It was executed by Henry G. Kreiss, under the general direction of Paul Manship in Essex, Connecticut, from the original painting by Brownell in 1856.

There were 25,018 pieces struck. In my opinion this is one of the most artistic and historical of the commemorative series.

WAMPUM NEVER OFFICIALLY RECOGNIZED AS
CURRENCY IN CANADA

When the French first made the acquaintance of the Indians along the St. Lawrence river, they soon discovered they were using a kind of money of their own.

It was called Wampum and consisted of beads skilfully made from shells. Value was determined by color; the light colored beads having a lesser value than the darker ones. But the French colonists did not take kindly to Indian money. True, it did play a small but unofficial part in the early trading -- the light beads were rated as one sou and the dark as two, but there are few records to indicate it was officially recognized as legal tender.

This was not the case, however, with the early English and Dutch colonists of Atlantic seaboard, for wampum was recognized by them as legal tender as late as the year 1670, and continued in circulation for twenty-five years after this date.

One of the chief reasons that the wampum did not find favor with the early French colonists was because the French king sent out more or less regular annual shipments of small French coins which the colonists knew and respected. These coins were used to pay the troops and lesser government officials. They did not, however, stay long in circulation but found their way into the coffers of merchants and importers who returned them to France as payment for goods received or on order.

Thus for a short time each year there was a great deal of money in circulation, but for months there was scarcely any at all. Then there was always the possibility that the annual shipment of these coins from France would become lost by tempest or act of war. And this possibility became an actual fact in 1685.

Why the French colonial government, faced with their first great financial crisis, did not turn to wampum, has never been satisfactorily explained.
